PROTECTING OUR PONDS IN COVINGTON LAKE

When it rains, water flows over impervious surfaces such as roads and rooftops. That runoff picks up oil, chemicals, and other pollutants and carries them into the storm drain system. Unlike the sanitary sewer system that drains waste from homes and businesses, water that enters the storm drain system is not treated at a wastewater treatment facility. It drains directly to one of our ponds. Everyone can make a difference in protecting our water quality.

What You Can Do to Help?

- Properly dispose of used motor oil at any of the Horry County Recycle Centers. Many auto parts stores also recycle used motor oil.
- Report any non-emergency pollution problem by contacting the Property Owners Association through Premier Management. For emergency pollution problems, such as major spills, call 911.

- Never dump anything down a storm drain. Storm drains carry untreated water directly to our ponds.
- Keep your leaves and grass clippings out of the street to keep them from washing into storm drains and causing drainage problems and pollution in our ponds.
- Keep your automobile and your gas-powered lawn mower or blower well tuned so they do not drip toxic fluids.
- Do not use chemicals/fertilizers on your lawn before it is expected to rain, and try using organic or slow-release products, which are better for your lawn and for the environment.
- Be conservative with pesticides and herbicides (weed killers) and try natural alternatives. Call your local Clemson Extension Service to find out more about natural pesticides.

Lawn Fertilizer Doesn't Just Fertilize Lawns

Lawn fertilizer, especially when applied incorrectly, fertilizes a lot more than just your lawn. Excess nutrients are carried by runoff into our ponds. The same nutrients that help grass grow also help algae and pond weeds grow, leading to algal blooms and excessive aquatic plants that are not only unpleasant to look at but also affect food quality and habitat for fish and other organisms.

Does this mean environmentally aware citizens are doomed to have unattractive lawns? No. By following the few simple recommendations, you can make sure that you're not contributing excess nutrients to our ponds.

Covington Lake homeowners should also consider the water quality and wildlife benefits of a more natural setting for lake-front property.

When you buy fertilizer the package will be labeled with three numbers. The first number indicates total nitrogen (N), the second indicates phosphorus (called available phosphate ( $P_2O_5$ )) and the third, soluble potash ( $K_2O$ ). Look for a middle number of zero, which indicates phosphorus free fertilizer

LIVING WITH URBAN WILDLIFE IN COVINGTON LAKE

The most common wildlife species encountered in urban surroundings, includes, but are not limited to: deer, raccoon, red fox, opossum, black bears, squirrels, and alligators.

Why are these animals living in my community?

Many of these urbanized animals are living with humans due to local land development and growth that was once their own natural habitat and home. Most urbanized wildlife species are opportunistic, intelligent creatures that have adapted well to our urban and suburban landscapes. Combined with a general lack of predators and an easy access to food sources, such as: garbage cans, compost bins, gardens and outdoor pet food bowls some wildlife species have been able to proliferate in most developed areas.

Identifying "nuisance" wildlife:

Urban dwelling wildlife is a fact of urban life. In many cases, tolerance and prevention (eliminating unnatural food sources, sealing up potential den locations) is the best approach. If you do find yourself in conflict with your local wildlife population, the first thing to consider is identifying the source of the problem. What is attracting the animal to your property? Is there a way to eliminate the attractant? Do you need to speak to your neighbors to do the same?

The vast majority of urban wildlife conflicts occur because someone in the neighborhood is either deliberately or inadvertently providing some sort of unnatural food source.

Do not feed wild animals:

Deliberate feeding of wildlife makes them more comfortable around humans and more likely to get into situations where they are unwanted or in danger.

It also encourages unnaturally high population levels within a Small geographic area. This creates a higher risk of disease transmission among the species and the likelihood that they will become pests. It is much better and more humane to allow population levels to adjust to the food and habitat naturally available.

Feed pets indoors: This will eliminate a raccoon attractant and will diminish the likelihood of an unwanted encounter between your pet and a wild animal.

Cover it: Tightly cover all garbage cans.
